The Muses' Bower.

"Thou Shalt Love Thy Neighbor as Thyself."

BY JOHN RUSHTON.

Emblazoned, not in front of heathen shrines
  This heavenly law, nor found by learned sage
In old Chaldaic or Egyptian mines,
  With mystery tinged, and frosted o'er with age.

But, like the sun, it beams with heavenly light,
  Demanding ever universal love;
It penetrates the gloom of sorrow's night,
  And cheers man's pathway to the home above

No splendid temple with its open door,
  And fragrant incense wafted t'ward the skies
Alike an offering for the rich and poor—
  Fulfills alone all the command implies.

The starry arch hung o'er the globe, is His
  Who flung it fresh from His creative hand;
The same Supreme, Almighty power it is
  Preserves and blesses man in every land.

In earth and heaven Jehovah's wondrous care
  Extends alike o'er all; His sovereign sway
Makes all men neighbors, cares and toils to share,
  Their God to honor, and His laws obey.

The poor, the sick, the tempted and the tried—
  Whether in palace or in cot they dwell—
Are one in Him, though fashion, wealth, and pride
  The brotherhood reject, the love repel.

The church, inspired with ardent zeal, will rise
  "Fair as the morn, clear as the cloudless sun,"
And prove her sacred kinship with the skies
  By love and service, till her work be done.

When each will love his neighbor, every woe
  And every joy will touch him like his own,
Until his neigbbor and himself shall know
  The glory of their heavenly Father's throne.

The Story-Teller.

A LIFE FOR A LIFE.

BY "RILL."

"Oh, Lionel! Lionel! You might have spared me this, and not come between me and my husband now." The speaker, a fair, young, delicate woman, raised her face supplicatingly to her companion, a tall, rough-bearded man of about thirty-five years of age. At that moment an evil light gleamed in his eyes, and a cruel expression played around his hard and unrelaxed mouth. He was looking down upon her; the strong breeze from the valley had blown the flaxen hair from the neat massive coils around her head, and it hung carelessly over her shoulders and shaded the pure brow.—The bright scarlet cloak which she had wrapped about her gave a life and coloring to the otherwise marble like face. She was excited and trembled violently, and her eyes flashed under the steady half triumphant gaze of Lionel Wickliffe.

"Spare you," he almost hissed; "yes, I suppose I ought. But you showed no mercy to me years ago. It is but fair that you should suffer some, in return for what I have endured."

Lady Chellis clasped her hands, an action which plainly revealed her efforts at self-control. Her eyes wandered down the valley as she murmured. "My God! What have I done to deserve this. Why have you come to bring back that wretched past, and now alienate me from my husband and part me from my child."

Lionel Wickliffe fairly glowered at her in his anger.

"What have you done to deserve this!" he repeated, his voice trembling with passion. "Can you forget how you hunted me down, gave me over to the law, and I would have hanged had I not escaped, and now that the moment of my revenge has come, I must keep silent and let you reign mistress of Chellis Hall in all your glory and splendor?—No, by Heaven! I will not! I will risk everything but I will let Roger Chellis know all. Let him know the woman he thinks his wife is my own. For I am your husband, and you once loved me; and I will tell him that also, it sounds nice to a fellow's vanity to think he was loved by beautiful Lady Chellis," he added mockingly.

"Oh!" she moaned with that stony, white despair creeping in every feature, "I was so young then, had you acted right, had you not driven me to desperation as you did, I might have been true to you now. But you forfeited my love, your own respect, you lost your manliness, became callous to all good influence. You have broken your solemn oath, and," here her voice faltered, "you show me no pity. You will reveal all to my husband, for your claim upon me you know is unjust. When we parted ten years ago, you swore you would never molest me, nor that we should ever meet again.—You gave up all claim upon me. I was forever free, if I did not inform upon your last and greatest crime. I thought you were dead, and—"

She hesitated. He gave a low coarse laugh as he said, "And was glad, I dare say."

A crimson spot burnt on either cheek, but she answered steadily, "I did not regret your death. I knew I should be absolved from all ties that, as once your wife, might still exist. I was free and I—I loved Roger Chellis. But now you have come back and at a risk of your own life, will tell Roger all, make him cast off, desert, spurn me, and God knows I cannot bear that. Lionel Wickliffe, I hate and detest you.—You are not a man, you are a devil. You have blighted my whole life, embittered my existence, and now you will break my heart. Oh! it is cruel, cruel!" and she burst into a storm of passionate sobbing.

Lionel Wickliffe stared moodily at her; but there was no sign of relenting in the dark face. There was a few moments of continued silence, unbroken, save by those long drawn sobs, and then he spoke, his tones hard and dry: "Lady Chellis, I think your prediction quite true.—When your lordly husband finds you are the wife of the murderer of his own brother, and you deceived him in marrying him, I scarcely think he will show you much mercy. He will probably tell you to bundle up your traps, and be off, if nothing more."

As he paused, Lady Chellis rose to her feet, and royal she appeared then. She flung back the mass of hair that had fallen across her face, with an impatient gesture. Her face became unnaturally white, and her eyes flashed with a steely light. It was a grand and beautiful picture. The man recoiled from the glance of scorn in her eyes. Those two on the lonely hillside, the gathering twilight, and the mass of black, rolling clouds in the west, against which the outlines of Lady Chellis' form showed boldly—it was a strong, weird picture, and the man instinctively drew back. Her breath came thick and fast as she spoke: "I shall not plead, Lionel Wickliffe, nor retreat. You hold my happiness and I hold your life; for surely as you part me from my husband, your life shall pay the forfeit. We are enemies, and there is war forever between us. Betray me, and you shall hang."

The man strode a step nearer, his face working in his passion.—"I'll murder you," he hissed.

She sprang back with a low, mocking laugh that rang out on the still air. "A life for a life!" and with these words she was gone.

He saw by a scarlet flash of lightning a flutter of the scarlet scarf, then she became lost to view, and it seemed that the wind brought back the echo of her last words, "A life for a life."

"Aye," said Lionel Wickliffe, with compressed lips, as he strode down the rough hill side. "A life for a life."

The mellow autumn sunlight came drifting through the green forest trees that clustered around Chellis Hall, the stately home of Sir Roger Chellis, changing the red leaves into golden yellow as silently they fell one by one to the ground, like bright hopes falling from a human heart. There was an indescribable pathos in those sad leaves. So thought Lady Chellis as she watched them, thinking how wonderfully they contrasted with her own life. For as each fluttering leaf went by, thus one by one each treasured hope and golden link that had bound her to her happy life, fell pale and stricken to the earth. The morning mist yet shadowed the far off hills, shedding a peculiar softness and languor around their craggy summits, and the birds sang as blithely in the trees, as though human wretchedness and breaking hearts dwelt not upon the fair earth or within sound of their sweet music.

For an hour Lady Esther Chellis had sat by the open window expecting each moment to be summoned to meet Sir Roger, for she had seen the form of Lionel Wickliffe as he passed from the library. She knew he had told all, and her heart lay cold and stony in her bosom. The very calmness of despair had fallen upon her to such an extent that she seemed incapable of realizing her dreadful position and suffering; suddenly a knock sounded on her chamber door, and a servant appeared with the intelligence that "Sir Roger wished to see her." A dry, tearless sob escaped her, and her head seemed rent with a tearing sharp pain in it which made her reel as she groped for the door.—With a mighty effort at self-control she started for the library, and when she reached it she hesitated, and breathed a prayer for strength. Sir Roger stood with his back partially towards her, but as soon as he heard her footstep he turned facing her.—His face was set, stern and dark.—"No mercy there," she said hopelessly to herself, as she encountered his cold eyes, and something of his expression was reflected in her own face.

In the effort to brace herself for the interview, unconsciously she had assumed a proud, defiant look mingled with a certain degree of hautiness, as though she was prepared to remain unbaffled, to assert herself as his wife, and indignantly deny the accusations he would utter.—There was for a few minutes an awkward silence. Had she come to him humble, bowed and cringing, he would have been lenient, though perhaps never forgiving. Lionel Wickliffe's story furnished too abundant proof to attempt a denial of its truth upon Lady Chellis' part. According to the law she had been and undoubtedly was yet the wife of Lionel Wickliffe, and as such, her past appeared only too doubtful.—That she herself was innocent, Sir Roger, in his wrath, gave little thought to. He judged her for a woman, who had deceived him into a seeming marriage, merely for his title and wealth. Sir Roger Chellis was very proud. Proud of his good name and a noble line of untarnished ancestry. And the thought that he had disgraced forever the unsullied name of Chellis was like wormwood and gall. He forgot that the woman before him had claimed his tenderest love—he forgot the moments of past happiness. Everything but his family pride. And he felt hardened and bitter towards her as he spoke: "Madame, I have, this morning, become acquainted with the history of your past life, through your husband;" he cruelly emphasized the name "Lionel Wickliffe."

"Oh, Roger!" she faltered; but he waived his hand toward her, to denote silence on her part, as he said:

"To you, forevermore, I am Sir Roger Chellis. When I first met you I deemed you a high-minded, pure woman, whose life held no dark passages. Nor can I tell you how great was the blow when I discovered you the wife of a most disreputable man. In marrying me you showed yourself a vile adventuress, and a deceiving, scheming woman. I dread to think that I have sheltered you as my wife under this roof for five years. I wish you to go immediately, that I may never look upon your false, hateful, wicked face again."

As Sir Roger was speaking a change had gradually come into Lady Chellis' face. Such words coming from one whom she loved as devotedly as she did Sir Roger, and whom she believed implicitly to be her husband until one short day before, could not fail to have their effect. Her artificial strength gave way entirely, and the excitement upon her nervous system was so great as for a time to deprive her of all power of endurance. Her face flushed, and a wild, feverish light came into her eyes. Her gaze seemed to wander past Sir Roger into vacancy. He had not followed the change, and when he finished he saw her lean forward as to grasp a chair.

"Do you heed me, Esther Wickliffe?" said he sternly.

That name seemed to act like magic. She flung up her hands with a dry, hard laugh, exclaiming wildly, "Ha! ha! Esther Wickliffe! that is what they called me, then? The murder! O, Lionel, if you will only leave me forever free, I will keep my oath about the secret. He shall never know about the murder." Then her voice grew faint and plaintive. "Oh, if Roger should ever know it he would hate me. Roger and little Percy, my boy!" and, with those delirious words she fell forward, unconscious, in her chair.

Sir Roger drew back. Had she been dying he would not have gone to her at that moment. He rang the bell. To the wondering servant he said, sternly: "Remove that woman and have her taken from the house."

The man knew his master too well to hesitate to dispute his orders.

A half hour later a physician gained admittance to Sir Roger. "Lady Chellis cannot be removed," he exclaimed, resolutely. "She is suffering from a dangerous attack of brain fever. She is delirious, and to remove her will probably cost her life."

"That explains her wild talk," muttered Sir Roger to himself. Then to the physician, "She is not Lady Chellis; she is a base woman and shall not remain under this roof though she die in leaving it."

Remonstrance being useless, the Doctor quietly withdrew, and poor unconscious Esther was carried by the devoted servants, who had all loved their bonnie young mistress, down to the game-keeper's cottage. It was weeks and weeks of suffering and delirium ere she finally returned to the light of reason, so weak, wan and white that she looked like some shadowy spirit. They never told her of Sir Roger's cruelty. "He was right," she would often repeat dreamily to herself; "Roger was right; I could not stay with him and little Percy. I suppose I was a wicked woman to love and let him marry me." And days went by, only a little stronger, but never a rift of color came into the pale face. She never blamed Sir Roger. She was absolved from her oath of secrecy concerning the murder, and all her bitter feelings were directed toward Lionel Wickliffe. She only waited until she could gain strength to go to the Hall, meet Sir Roger, and denounce his brother's murderer.

The yellow leaves had long since disappeared, and gusts of wind mingled with blinding snow swept by the cottage. Everything was growing dreary, cold and dark, and one night as the first few stars shone from the darkening sky, a little figure wrapped in a black cloak, stole silently from the cottage. Cautiously it sped under the shadow of the trees in the great park, until at last, trembling, little broken-hearted Esther stood at stately Chellis Hall. Only one light she saw; that the firelight's glow in Sir Roger's private room. Noiselessly she stole through the doorway, and stood once more with her hand upon the latch. How well she remembered the last time she had hesitated there. She tried to stifle the feelings of wild regret and love that welled up in her heart. "Roger was right," she said again to herself in that hopeless monotone. Then she opened the door very timidly and entered. Sir Roger sat with his head bowed upon his hands, and a gleam of firelight falling across it just then showed the deep lines on the forehead and face, and a woeful haggardness upon every feature. His hair that had only a few weeks before been black and glossy, was now thickly threaded with white. His attitude and expression all denoted the keenest suffering. The cool moments of reason and reflection had come, which showed how cruelly unjust he had been to Esther. She had believed herself his wife and had proved a royal, true one. She was innocent and blameless. Sir Roger could not but acknowledge that to himself now. Though they might indeed be separated forever, he could have been kinder to her and not have turned her pitilessly from his door, in her suffering, and now where was she? Alas, he knew not; and at the thought a deep groan escaped his lips. Esther expected reproach and upbraiding when Sir Roger would discover her—so she shrank still farther into the friendly darkness as she said timidly, "Sir Roger."

He started from his seat and peering into the dense shadow saw Esther as she stood, with her hood thrown back from her head, making a beautiful picture in the back ground. A glad look leaped into his eyes, though he said in a voice of ineffable sadness, for he recognized the barrier forever between them, "Esther, why have you come?"

"O! Sir Roger!" she answered, piteously, "he murdered your brother. You know the rest. I thought when I married you he was dead. But he has come back and made you hate me. Don't blame me too much, Sir Roger. I should not have come, but it was he who killed your poor brother, and—and he must not escape."

"Esther, I know all. A reformed comrade of his betrayed him. The officers are now on his track. He is hiding among the hills, and will doubtless be captured to-night. I have treated you very badly little Esther," he added, huskily. "Do you think you can forgive me? Oh, it is hard, my darling, to think we are parted forever, and you so innocent."

"Hush, Roger," came very softly from her white lips, "I must go now," and she turned facing the window. Sir Roger was only human after all. What availed his wealth, his pride, and all, if that fair haired girl left him? No, no! his love should overcome.

"Esther," he exclaimed passionately, drawing her to his breast, "I cannot let you go. I love you too well. Lionel Wickliffe has no claims upon you. You are my own wife. Say that you do love me, my darling."

"Oh, Roger, I do," came from the glad lips.

Then there was a shivering of glass, a flash and a loud report, and a bullet entered her heart. "Take that," came a deep, savage voice. "You white-faced fool, you betrayed me into this cursed trap, and I swore that it should be a life for a life when we parted." Lionel Wickliffe then put the pistol to his own head to fire, but it was knocked upward, and the ball sped harmlessly through the air, by an officer who had witnessed all, and was in pursuit of Wickliffe. He was finally secured and taken away. Sir Roger, dumb with grief, stood holding Esther, who was breathing her last. "Can nothing be done?" he appealed to the physician who had come. "Nothing!" was the reply. "Oh, my darling!" he groaned. She could not speak; her eyes closed, and he laid her back gently—dead.

Lionel Wickliffe was condemned, and soon after hung.

Sir Roger Chellis, heart-broken, buried poor dead Esther where the ripple of the brook could be heard, and the first wild daisy blossom on her grave. And all lonely he lived at the hall, save with his boy, whom he taught to learn his mother's name, and to love her sad memory.

Reading for the Million.

The Fellow Who Looks Like Me.

Max Adeler, who writes for a Philadelphia paper, has a friend named Slimmer, who deserves pity. He was going up to Reading the other day, and when he reached the depot, he happened to look into the ladies' room. A woman sat there with a lot of baggage and three children, and when she saw Slimmer she rushed at him, and before he could defend himself she flung her arms about his neck, nestled her head upon his breast and burst into tears. Slimmer was amazed, indignant, confounded; and ere he could find utterance for his feelings, she exclaimed:

"Oh, Henry, dear Henry! we are united at last. Are you well? Is Aunt Martha still alive? Haven't you longed to see your own dear Louisa?"

And she looked into Slimmer's face and smiled through her tears.

"Madame," said he solemnly, "if I am the person alluded to as Henry, permit me to say that you have made a mistake. My name is Lemuel, I have no Aunt Martha, and I don't own any solitary Louisa. Oblige me by letting go my coat, it excites remark."

Then she buried her bonnet deeper into his waistcoat, and began to cry harder than ever and said:

"Oh, Henry, how can you treat me so? How can you pretend you are not my husband?"

"Madame," screamed Slimmer, "if you do not cease sopping my shirt bosom, and remove your umbrella from my corn, I shall be obliged to call for the police. Let me go, I say."

"The children are here," she persisted, "they recognize their father, don't you, children?"

"Yes, yes," they exclaimed, "it's pa, it's our dear pa."

And they grappled Slimmer by the trouser's leg and hung on to his coat tail.

"Woman!" he shrieked, "this is getting serious. Unhand me, I say."

And he tried to disengage himself from her embrace, and in the midst of the struggle a stranger entered with a carpet-bag. He looked exactly like Slimmer—and when he saw his wife in Slimmer's arms he became excited, and floored Slimmer with the carpet-bag, and asked what he meant. He called next day to apologize. His wife had made the mistake because of Slimmer's likeness to him. And now Slimmer wishes he may soon be kicked in the face by a mule, so that he will resemble no other human being on earth.

IGNORANCE is a grand, good thing, and ought to be taught in the seminaries. "I don't know" covers up more sins than charity, and saves more trouble every day of the week twenty times over than all the learning of all the school men of antiquity.

"You are writing my bill on very rough paper," said a client to his attorney.—"Never mind," said the lawyer, "it has to be filed before it comes into court."

Valuable Suggestions.

Too low an estimate is likely to be set on the domestic value of newspapers. After reading them, and putting ourselves, through their agency, in mental correspondence with the world, they are thrown aside and forgotten. But to suppose their usefulness bounded by their news columns and the waste bag is a thriftless mistake.

In the first place there are household recipes, to be found in stray corners, often excellent, and deserving a refuge on the fly-leaf of the family cook-book. Then come the pretty verses, the strange and droll stories, the brief biographies and reminiscences which, pasted in a scrap book, are a source of never-ending pleasure, not only to those who do not care for richer intellectual food, but to those who have only odd minutes for reading.

Notwithstanding the squibs jocular journalists have penned on the use of newspapers for bedclothing, we know from experience that these are not to be despised. They may not be as comfortable as your blankets, but certainly they keep out the cold. Two thicknesses of paper are better than a pair of blankets, and in the case of persons who dislike the weight of many bedclothes, they are invaluable. A spread made of a double layer of papers between a covering of calico or chintz, is desirable in every household. The papers should be tacked together with thread, and also basted to the covering to keep them from slipping. An objection has been on account of rustling made, but if soft papers be chosen the noise will not be annoying, especially should the spread be laid between a blanket and the counterpane.

As a protection to plants against cold, both in and out of doors, nothing is better. If newspapers are pinned up over night at a window between pots and glass, the flowers will not only not be frozen, but will not even get chilled, as they are so liable to be at this season. In the same way, if taken to cover garden beds, on the frosty nights of early autumn, they will allow the plants to remain safely out doors sometime later than is common.

One of the oddest services to put our journals to is the keeping of ice in Summer. An ingenious housekeeper recently discovered that her daily lump of ice would last nearly twice as long when wrapped in newspapers, and placed in any kind of covered box, as when trusted solely to a refrigerator. This is very convenient, since it is possible to have the best and cheapest refrigerator constantly on hand.

To polish all kinds of glass after washing, except table glass, no cloth or flannel is half so good as a newspaper; and for a baker's dozen of other uses, quite foreign to its primal purpose, it is without a rival.—Scribner's Monthly.

How to be Handsome.

If we are inflicted by nature with crooked noses and irregular features, it is because of irregularities in our ancestor's features or habits, and we cannot rid ourselves of them; but we can so live that our children and grandchildren can be handsome. Rules of health must be observed. Keep clean—wash freely and universally with cold water. All the skin wants leave to act freely, and it will take care of itself. Its thousands of air holes must not be plugged up. Eat regularly and simply. The stomach can no more work all the time, night and day than a horse; it must have regular work and regular rest. Good teeth are essential to good looks, especially if people live so much on the surface that they are continually talking or laughing. Brush them with a soft brush, especially at night. Go to bed with teeth clean. Of course to have white teeth it is needful to let tobacco alone. Every woman knows that. And any powder or wash for the teeth should be very simple. Acids may whiten the teeth, but they take off the enamel or injure it. Look well to the ventilation of your rooms, especially your sleeping rooms. No one can have a clear skin who breathes bad air. But, more than all, in order to look well, wake up the mind and the soul. When the mind is awake, the dull, sleepy look passes away from the eyes. Keep thinking pleasant, noble thoughts, and read not trashy novels, but books that have something in them. Talk with people who know something; hear lectures and learn by them. This is one good of preaching. A man thinks, and works, and tells us the result. But if we listen, and heed, and understand, the mind and soul are waked up. If the spiritual nature is aroused, so much the better. We have seen a plain face really glorified with love of God and man which shows through it. Let us grow handsome.

The Autumn-Time.

In the eternal round of seasons there is nothing strange; and yet a very common and pleasant custom it is, as one goes out and we stand on the threshold of another, to take a survey of both. When grim old winter sets his snowy foot and icy grasp upon us, the soft balmy airs of spring are anticipated wholly with delight. Neither drizzling rain, nor omnipresent slush, find a place in the mental picture. But now these are palpable enough—uncomfortably palpable, and might be insupportable, but for the expectation of the approaching delights of summer, whose clear skies and rich vegetation in turn leads us to forget the sweltering temperature and long droughts, which in due order assert themselves and incline ever discontented humanity to cast another glance forward—this time to autumn, the season now opened.

Of all seasons, autumn promises most, and disappoints most. Melancholy it may be, yet its melancholy brings no touch of pain. There is death in the wailing winds—a dirge they seem to chant for the withering leaves, falling fruit, and decaying flowers, even as the fresher breezes of spring are a natal anthem. But it is death dealing with maturity, and, however sad, but fulfilling its mission at a natural and befitting period. The process is suggestive of calmness and repose, and everything surrounding helps to produce that effect. If one is influenced at all, it is into a quieter, more thoughtful mood, and for once he feels measurably well disposed to linger, content with the present, instead of rapid taxing anticipation. Golden woods; fields and forests in purple, yellow and russet; delicate, many tinted twilights, and all softened, subdued, and invested with an additional charm by such hues as that which belongs to our Indian summer—there is at no other time so exquisite a treat for the eye.

MONEY WANTED.

Court is approaching and we are compelled to remind those in arrears for subscriptions, advertising and job work, that we need money badly and we earnestly hope that they will not permit Court to pass by without paying up. There is not a man in the county who owes us, but can bring us the money or send it in with some one coming to Court. Times are just as hard with us as with everbody else, and we must have money to pay for labor and materials. It don't make any difference how short we are, our hands expect to be paid promptly, and if we fail they growl until we wish that every one indebted to us could hear what ill-nature their delinquency creates. Pay up! Your bills are small and can be readily met. The aggregated small bills enable us to pay our large and constantly maturing ones. We don't want to owe anybody, and if our delinquents will pay up we will soon wipe out all our indebtedness and go on our way rejoicing. Don't fail to pay up and give us a chance to rejoice. tf.

The Morning after the Battle!

The Smoke not Entirely Cleared Away!

It May be a Victory, but the Shouts of the Enemy are Extremely Annoying!

We have held our paper back until 10 A. M. this (Wednesday) morning, for the purpose of giving our readers the result of yesterday's election. The vote as near as we can determine from the mass of returns in the morning papers, indicates an overwhelming triumph for the Democratic party. New York and Massachusetts are both claimed to have gone Democratic. The next Congress, in all probability, will be Democratic. This State has gone Republican, as near as we can judge, by a few thousand. In the county the entire Fusion ticket is, quite probably, elected by a considerable majority. The returns received indicate this. Wister is elected to Congress. Blair, it is thought, is defeated in the 17th district.

There were many things that combined to bring about this state of affairs, but we will not attempt to explain any of the causes at present. We can sum it all up in the famous remark of Bill Stokes: "Licked like ——!"

Our New York Letter.

The Pay of Actors and Writers—Horses—Co-operation—Working Mens' Club—The Brooklyn Trouble—Business.

NEW YORK, Nov. 2, 1874.

THE PAY OF THE PEOPLE WHO AMUSE US.

They who do the world the most good are not those who get the best pay for it. The clergyman who gets $700 a year in the country has to bring to his profession talent of the highest possible order, and is compelled to an amount of labor that would kill an ordinary dray-horse, and the same may be said of the country editor, the lawyer and the physician. But the popular actors or singers—they have all the good things of life unstinted. Sothern for instance has played Lord Dundreary 5,000 times, for which he has received an average of $400 for each performance, making the snug sum of $2,000,000 fo the one piece. Joe Jefferson has playe Rip Van Winkle 2,000 times, and has averaged over $500 for each performance. He has made (and has it yet) over a million of dollars. Booth gets $600 a night when he plays for a certainty, but he has received as high as $3,000 for a single performance.

But the Opera singers beat the actors in enticing money out of the pockets of the people. Nilsson does not open her mouth short of $2,000 a night, and Lucca and the other song-birds get but little less. They live like Princesses and throw away money with both hands.

But the writers and artists do not fare as well; $100 for a magazine article looks rather large, but then it takes Parton weeks to write one. When a poet gets fifty dollars for a little poem, it looks like paying a great deal for a small piece of work, but remember that the poet labored weeks and weeks constructing the poem, and polishing and finishing the lines after they were constructed. The highest pay journalists get in New York is paid Whitelaw Reid, of the Tribune, who gets $7,000 per annum. Bromley, who is the clearest wit on the New York press, does his delightful sarcasm on the Tribune for $5,000 a year. But these are exceptional cases. From $20 to $60 a week is considered good pay, and the men who get it are counted as lucky.

The authors of books make but very little by their work. There is occasionally an Uncle Tom's Cabin, which made a fortune for the writer and two or three for the publishers, and the Lamp Lighter was just about as successful. But these are two out of a million. Out of one hundred books published, ninety are flat dead failures. Of the remaining ten, probably one may reach a sale of 10,000 copies.—The author gets for his copyright ten per cent. of the retail price, which on a $1.50 book would be fifteen cents. If it sells 10,000 he gets $1,500. But the chances are as a hundred to one against its having any such sale. A book that sells 2,500 is considered a fair success, which gives the author $375 for his labor. The most of them manage to run their work through a paper first, thus getting double pay.—Bret Harte makes a good fair living by his pen, but as yet has saved nothing.—Messrs. Henri Brown, Col. Thomas W. Knox, and that class of writers make more money because they work harder.

The women writers do just about the same as their brethren—Shirley Dare, Nellie Hutchinson, Mrs. Runkle, "Olivia," and the great army of correspondents and magazine writers manage to make from $3,000 to $5,000 a year though there isn't one of them who ought not to have twice that.

How these ladies must envy Nilsson with her $2,000 a night.

FAST HORSES.

This is the season to see fast horses in the parks and on the traveling roads in the vicinity. The cool, crisp weather makes driving a delight, and I doubt if any city in the world can show so much in the way of speed. Commodore Vanderbilt is the heaviest patron of rapid horse-flesh next to Bonner, of the Ledger; but there are plenty of men unknown to fame who keep stock quite as progressive as either of them. There is one team to be seen every day on the road that can make its mile in 2:22 easily. The horses have been driven singly, one in 2:19, and the other in 2:18. It was sold to a California speculator last week for $40,000.

And by the way there is no business so profitable, that I know of, as the raising, training and matching of carriage horses. Any kind of a matched team that will do at all for a carriage, is worth $1,200; and teams sell anywhere from that figure to $5,000. These teams, understand, make no pretensions to speed or any approach to it. They are simply handsome, well-matched, stylish horses, that have fairly decent action and look well in plated harness. They must have some blood in them—must be well-broken and kind, but above all must look well. To look well in horses is the same thing in New York as it is in everything else. Most everything goes by looks. The demand for horses of this class is always brisk, and the market is always certain. The life of a horse in this city is necessarily brief, even though they are as carefully taken care of as carriage horses are. The close stables and hard pavements finish them rapidly.

CO-OPERATION—CLUBS.

Some of the workingmen of the city have made a move in the direction which I count good, and the result of which I shall watch with interest. There is located at 113 West Twentieth street, a workingmen's club, modeled after those so successfully maintained in England. Although of recent origin, it has a membership of one hundred, composed entirely of workingmen. The reading, game and conversation rooms are not only neatly but tastefully furnished, thus providing a pleasant home-like place in which they may spend their evenings. All the daily and weekly papers are on file, not to speak of a library of fair proportions. It must be borne in mind that this is entirely a workingmen's movement, that all the members are poor, and hence the success is the more of a surprise. Attached to the club in the lower part of the building is a co operative store, where groceries of all descriptions are sold at wholesale prices. This branch, only a few weeks old, has been attended with gratifying results since its inauguration. I am not so certain about the cooperative store, but I am entirely sure as to the reading room and that part of it.—Anything that will keep working men out of doggeries, and give them rational amusement combined with instruction, is a good thing and cannot be too much encouraged. It is a success—that is the library and club part of it—and there is no earthly reason why there should not be hundreds of them in this city, and one or more in every city or village.

THE BROOKLYN TROUBLE

has settled down in the courts, and it is to be hoped it will stay there till it is decided. Beecher has withdrawn all his lecture engagements, because he has to give his whole mind to his suits; and Tilton has announced that he will accept no engagements till after the first of January, for the same reason. He is with his counsel every minute of the day, and is as busy as he can possibly be. Mrs. Tilton, contrary to expectation, maintains her attitude of hostility to Theodore, and is co-operating with his enemies. Florence, the eldest daughter of the disunited pair, has taken a position in one of the public schools in Brooklyn as a teacher. Theodore is very poor. His lecture business was ruined by the Woodhull business, and his enforced quitting of the Independent was another blow from which he never recovered. He is financially ruined. Beecher is not troubled in that way, for he holds his pulpit and his salary, and besides he was well off when the trouble began. But Tilton has friends who will furnish him with the munitions of war, and he will make a desperate fight for his life. Such men don't die easily or quietly.

BUSINESS

is picking up a little, but it is not what it ought to be at this season of the year.—The merchants from abroad are buying just as little as they can buy, and buy anything. None of them know what is the matter—they all say there is produce enough in the country, and that times ought to be good, but they are not; and they dare not risk anything. So trade languishes. But the theatres do not, and the bar-rooms are doing a rushing business In fact the kinds of business that one would suppose hard times would kill, are doing well. The traffic in articles of necessity is dull, and the trade in articles of luxury is as brisk as it can be. Curious world this! It is going to take the country a year or two to get back to its normal condition. PIETRO.

Letter from Williamsport.

WILLIAMSPORT, Pa.,
October 23, 1874.

MESSRS. EDITORS:—Pouring over the JOURNAL of last week I thought I might send you a few items of interest to those who never visited this region. Williamsport is a handsome town, with a population of between fifteen and thirty thousand inhabitants, according to the estimates made by those who ought to know. The chief products are lumber and politics—this last being the staple at present. The excessively hard times, you know, will drive vagrants into employment sometimes of a rather mean character. In company with a friend, a few days since, we left town and drove to the flourishing village of Montoursville, on the Catawissa Railroad. The inhabitants seemed exceeding diffident, until, learning that we were not candidates for Sheriff, they become kind and communicative. Leaving Montoursville we drove up the Loyalsock Creek, the road winding around the mountains, following the creek channel through narrow mountain defiles that look as though they serve as so many Thermopylais, and presenting natural scenery which, for beauty, cannot be surpassed perhaps in Pennsylvania. The mountains are covered with immense hemlock forests which abound in game. Not being particularly in a hurry to return, we remained over night with a friend in Wallace Run, and after a night's rest concluded to spend a day in quest of game. Provided with a Harper's Ferry musket, which, when minus its coat of rust, looked as though it had served originally for a three pounder in the seige of the immortal John Brown, I started with my friends for the mountain, the object of search being pheasants, which were extremely plenty. We began to ascend the Ridge, and, by mutual consent, separated. Seeing a fine grey squirrel I concluded to have at least one inmate for my game bag, and drawing as fine a bead as the rusty sights would permit I fired.—I am not at present prepared to tell the fate of that squirrel. I leave that for the pen of the future historian. I remember when the gun went off I had a vague impression of a storm—a thunder-storm—and that somehow a very large flash of lightning struck me. I have had reason to doubt that since. I found myself reclining, however, (after the concussion,) in a delightful arbor of blackberry bushes. I have ever since had a mortal antipathy to Harper's Ferry muskets, especially as fowling pieces. I called my friend, who was standing at a considerable distance, impressed with the idea that a powder mill had exploded. He came toward me with an expression of great delight on his face. He had indiscreetly judged my success by the report of my gun and was convinced I had killed a buffalo. I didn't smile; I never was more disgusted with hunting in my life. I told him so. I said I wasn't well; I had the head-ache, and I would go back. We both returned and started toward Williamsport, by way of Trout Run and Crescent—both of which are small villages on the Northern Central Railroad. The valley is extremely narrow until near Williamsport, when it widens to a broad expanse of richly cultivated rolling uplands. We found business of every character dull. Having already presumed on your patience, I am

Letter from Mercersburg.

MERCERSBURG, PA., Nov. 2, 1874.

MR. EDITOR.—After a long and very pleasant vacation during the months of July, August and a part of September, we have returned to the classic shades of Mercersburg, and have entered upon the duties of another College year. Physically, we feel the benefit resulting from vacation; we feel invigorated, and better prepared for the discharge of the duties devolving upon us, yet we take up the burden somewhat reluctantly. The fun, the poetry as it were, of vacation is a little difficult to change to the prose, or the reality of hard study; however we are gradually getting back into the old routine of things; we are gradually shaking off the careless habits contracted during vacation, and are becoming a little more regular, particularly in our breakfasts and dinners, in our hours for study and our hours for play, we believe—from the force of necessity—that regularity is one of the most important things in our work.

The prospects for the College are exceedingly encouraging. Notwithstanding the financial state of affairs she has never opened under more favorable auspices; neither is she falling short in number.—Huntingdon county can claim more of an interest here than she has ever done before; with the exception of one institution she has more representation here than at any other in the State.

A fact worthy of note and showing that Mercersburg College is growing in favor even in old Huntingdon county, we can now truly say "we are seven," two of which are in the Senior class, one in the Junior, one in the Freshmen and the remaining three in the preparatory department. We trust that the interest in Christian education will continue to be manifested among the good people of our native county, and that by the time another school year rolls around others may be ready to join in with us as students of Mercersburg College. B.

COOK-STOVE AND DICTIONARY.—No well regulated household is complete without a copy of Webster's Unabridged Dictionary. We would as soon think of getting along without a cook-stove. One young man in this vicinity bought two copies of Webster at the bookstore within a few weeks. When he purchased the second one the proprietor asked him what he was going to do with two. "Why," said he, "I have just got married and my folks won't let me take away from the house the dictionary I first bought, so I am obliged to get another as I cannot get along without it;" and the young man was right.

A tract of magnificently timbered and very fertile land, covering about half a million acres, has lately been discovered in the middle of Newfoundland.

Thanksgiving Proclamation.

President Grant has issued the following:

By the President of the United States of America.

A PROCLAMATION.

We are reminded by the changing seasons that it is time to pause in our daily avocations and offer thanks to Amighty God for the mercies and abundance of the year which is drawing to a close. The blessings of a free government continue to be vouchsafed to us; the earth has responded to the labor of the husbandmen; the land has been free from pestilence; internal order is being maintained and peace with other powers has prevailed. It is fitting that at all stated periods we should cease from our accustomed pursuits and from the turmoil of our daily lives and unite in thankfulness for the blessings of the past and in the cultivation of kindly feelings toward each other. Now, therefore, recognizing these considerations, I, Ulysses S. Grant, President of the United States, recommend to all citizens to assemble in their respective places of worship on Thursday, the 26th day of November next, and express their thanks for the mercy and favor of Almighty God, and, laying aside all political contentions and all secular occupations, to observe such day as a day of rest, thanksgiving and praise.

In witness whereof I have hereunto set my hand and caused the seal of the United States to be affixed.

Done at the city of Washington this 27th day of October, in the year 1874, and of the Independence of the United States the 98th.

U. S. GRANT.

By the President.
HAMILTON FISH, Secretary of State.

FIFTH AND LAST GIFT CONCERT IN AID OF THE PUBLIC LIBRARY OF KENTUCKY.—A Card to the Public.—The management have determined to have the drawing of the Fifth and last Gift Concert of the Public Library of Kentucky on the 30th day of November next. We believe now that all the tickets will be sold, and that the drawing will be a full one; but whether all are sold or not, the drawing will nevertheless certainly come off on the day appointed.

The special object of this card is to call a meeting of the ticket-holders at Public Hall, on the 20th of November, to make arrangements in connection with the committee appointed by the Trustees to superintend the counting of the tags representing the numbers of tickets sold. While there is no actual necessity for the presence of ticket-holders, as under our arrangements the interests of all are equally cared for, yet at the same time I would greatly prefer that as many of those interested as can, would attend this meeting and see each for himself how perfectly fair and impartial the distribution must be.

Every arrangement has been made for the drawing—but little more than a month remains for the sale of the remainder of the tickets, and whatever is done must be done promptly.

Destructive Fire.

SELINSGROVE, October 31—2:30 P. M.—About 5:30 last evening fire was discovered in Schnure's stable, and in ten minutes the whole corner was in flames, and raged without ceasing until 9:30, when the engines commenced to get it under control. There were eight business houses, twenty-two residences, the Methodist church, public school, Selinsgrove Times office, Begstressers's tannery, two hotels (Keystone and National), besides about ten stables destroyed.

Loss, between $100,000 and $150,000. Many are without houses and are sheltered by the neighbors. The wind was very high and showered sparks half a mile from the town. We had two fire companies from Sunbury.

☞ Whatever we say of Johnson's Anodyne Liniment is strictly true, and time will verify it.

ROBERT DALE OWEN

Will continue, from time to time, his Chapters of Autobiography.

FRANCIS PARKMAN,

From his studies for the volume of the History of England and France in North America, to succeed his "Canada under the Old Regime," will contribute papers on the Wars of New England and Canada, and picturesque episodes of the old colonial life in Quebec and Montreal.

JOHN FISKE

Will treat of topics with which his name is identified, in three or four papers.

In pursuance of a purpose to record important traits of the history of the War of Secession and the events leading to it, The Atlantic will follow Mr. Eggleston's "Recollections of a Rebel" with six papers on John Crown, by F. B. SANBORN, whose acquaintance with the theories, plans, and performances of the great abolitionist is full, exact, and intimate.

The valuable articles of DAVID A. WELLS and EDWARD ATKINSON on Currency and Finance, during 1874, will be succeeded by papers on these interests, from the same authors, in 1875.

It is expected that DR. BROWN-SEQUARD will be able to furnish some popular papers on those branches of medical science in which he is authority.

There will be a story in several parts by W. D. HOWELLS, a novel by HENRY JAMES, Jr., and short stories from J. T. TROWBRIDGE, T. B. ALDRICH, ROSE TERRY, WILLIAM M. BAKER, and other capital story-tellers.

Poetry will be well represented by the names of LONGFELLOW, LOWELL, WHITTIER, ALDRICH, HOLMES, STEDMAN, HAYNE, Miss PHELPS, CELIA THAXTER. The best American poetry appears in The Atlantic.

The four departments of LITERATURE, MUSIC, ART and EDUCATION will be filled monthly by vigorous editorial articles and reviews.

WILD OATS.

PROSPECTUS FOR 1875.

THE CHAMPION AMERICAN

COMIC PAPER.

Illustrated by a corps of the best American artists, and contributed to by the most popular humorists and satirists of the day.

Wild Oats now enters successfully upon the sixth year of its existence, and has become the established humorous and satirical paper of the country. It was started and continued the first year as a monthly, then, to satisfy the demand of the public, it was changed to a fortnightly. Still continuing its good work of hitting folly as it flies, and showing up the political and social shame by its masterly cartoons and pungent editorials. It achieved even greater success than before, and was recognized as the ablest and brightest of its class. Since then we have yielded still further to the public demand, and now publish Wild Oats weekly! It has literally grown into its present shape on its intrinsic merits, being the first successful weekly humorous paper ever published in this country.

Among the artists especially engaged to furnish illustrations for Wild Oats are Frank Bellew, Thomas Worth, Hopkins, Wales, Shelton, Wolf, Jump, Keettels, Stuckhardt, Day, Poland, and several others who are yet unknown to fame.

In its literary departments Wild Oats will, as it always has, stand alone and unapproachable. At least one first-class serial story will always be found in its pages, by the best humorous, satirical, and character writers in the United States; while its sketches and squibs will be sparkling, original and pointed.

Wild Oats will be first-class in every particular, and on this account may be taken into the best familes without fear or suspicion, as no word or illustration will appear that can offend the most fastidious.

SHERIFF'S SALES.

By virtue of sundry writs of Fi. Fa. Vend. Exp. and Lev. Fa. to me directed, I will expose to public sale, at the Court House, in Huntingdon, on MONDAY, November 9, 1874, at 1 o'clock, p. m., the following described real estate, to wit:

All that certain frame dwelling house of two stories, having a front of twenty-two feet and a depth of eighteen feet, located on a lot or piece of ground, situate in that part of the borough of Huntingdon, known as West Huntingdon, in said county, fronting twenty-five feet on Mifflin street and running back at right angles one hundred and fifty feet to an alley, being the southern half of lot No. 190 in Thompson's addition to the borough of Huntingdon, bounded on the north by lot of —— Showalter, and on the south by lot of W. S. Kidd, together with the ground covered by said building and the lot or piece of ground adjacent and appurtenant to said building and belonging thereto and to the owners of said building.

Seized, taken in execution, and to be sold as the property of A. S. Butler and Emma R. Butler his wife, owners or reputed owners, and A. S. Butler, contractor.

ALSO—All of defendant's right, title and interest in a certain lot of ground, situate in the borough of Huntingdon, Pa., fronting about fifty feet on Sixth street, and running back at right angles about 55 feet, bounded on the north east by lot of the heirs of Mrs. Luden, on the south west by Allegheny street and on the south east by lot of Mrs. Hildebrand, having thereon erected a two-story dwelling house (new), a log dwelling house, log stable and other improvements.

Seized, taken in execution, and to be sold as the property of Henry Hassenpflug.

ALSO—All of defendant's right, title and interest in a house and lot of ground, in Mechanicsville, Franklin township, containing one acre of land, having thereon erected a frame house, stable and other outbuildings, adjoining lands of M. G. Keatley on the east, Mary Johnston on the west.

Seized, taken in execution, and to be sold as the property of William Rothrock.

ALSO—All of defendant's right, title and interest in a certain piece, parcel, or lot of ground, situate in the borough of Cassville, Huntingdon county, Pa., fronting about 140 feet on the public road leading from Calvin to Cassville, bounded on the north and west by lands claimed by Harris Webster, on the east by an alley and lot of Moyer, containing about one-half acre, having thereon erected a large two-story Tavern Stand, part frame and part brick, a large frame stable, and other improvements.

Seized, taken in execution, and to be sold as the property of Lucy W. Brown, Administratrix of Dr. H. L. Brown, deceased.

ALSO—All of defendants' right, title and interest in all those two certain lots of ground, situate in the village of Scottsville, county of Huntingdon, State of Pennsylvania, being Nos. 28 and 39 in the plan of said village; lot No. 28 having thereon erected a two-story frame house (used as a store room), and other outbuildings; and lot No. 39 having thereon erected a two-story frame dwelling house 40 feet by 22 feet, more or less, and fronting on Ashman and Henderson streets, with other outbuildings thereon, being the same two lots of ground which by sundry conveyances became vested in James E. Glasgow and as whose property the same were levied upon and sold to Zachariah Gemmell and Robert Cresswell, &c.

Seized, taken in execution, and to be sold as the property of Samuel L. Glasgow and Harriet N., his wife.

ALSO—All of defendant's right, title and interest in all that certain message or tenement and lot of ground, situate in Dorland's addition to the borough of Huntingdon, Pa., fronting 50 feet on Seventh street in said borough, and running back at right angles 190 feet to an alley, having thereon erected a two-story brick dwelling house, frame stable and other outbuildings, bounded on the north by lot of George Snyder, and on the south by lot of Jacob Barrick, it being lot No. 7 in Dorland's addition to the borough of Huntingdon.

Seized, taken in execution, and to be sold as the property of Michael M. Logan.

ALSO—All of defendant's right, title and interest in all that certain lot or parcel of ground, situate in the township of Henderson, county of Huntingdon, Pa., lying and being on the eastern side of Standing Stone Creek, and bounded and described as follows: beginning at the western corner of a lot owned by Thomas Fisher, thence along the land of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company 50 feet and 6 inches to the public road leading from the Turnpike to the Lick Ridges, thence along the eastern side of said Ridge 295 feet, more or less, to the lower boundry line or lines of an alley of 20 feet running along the hill; thence along said alley as above described 50 feet 6 inches to the upper corner of said lot of Thomas Fisher; thence along said lot 295 feet, more or less, to the place of beginning, having thereon erected a brick dwelling house, and other improvements.

Seized, taken in execution, and to be sold as the property of Samuel Houck.

ALSO—All of defendant's right, title and interest in a certain lot of ground, situate in the borough of Mount Union, Huntingdon county, Pa., fronting 50 feet on Shirley street and running back at right angles 150 feet to an alley, joined on the west by lot of Peter Shaver, (Riner) and on the east by lot of Rev. J. M. Smith, having thereon erected a two-story frame dwelling house, a frame stable and other improvements.

Seized, taken in execution and to be sold as the property of John S. Coulter.

ALSO—All of defendant's right, title and interest in all that certain lot of ground, situate in the borough of Huntingdon, Penna., fronting fifty feet, more or less, on the Warm Spring's road, and running back along Brady street three hundred and fifty feet, more or less, to an alley, bounded on the north west by Brady street, on the South east by lot of Richard Bryan, having thereon erected a two-story frame dwelling house.

Seized, taken in execution, and to be sold as the property of G. H. Shagart.

HUNTINGDON COUNTY, SS:

The Commonwealth of Pennsylvania to Luther Smith, late of Huntingdon county, greeting. Whereas, Clara S. Smith, by her next friend, J. L. McIlvaine, did on the 11th day of April, 1874, prefer her petition to the Judges of the Court of Common Pleas of said county of Huntingdon praying for the causes therein set forth, that she might be divorced from the bonds of matrimony entered into with you the said Luther Smith, as we have before commanded you, that setting aside all business and excuses whatsoever you be and appear in your proper person before our Judges at Huntingdon, at our county Court of Common Pleas there to be held for that county on the second Monday and ninth day of November next, to answer the petition or libel of Clara S. Smith, your wife, why she should not be divorced from the bonds of matrimony entered into with you agreeably to the act of Assembly in such case made and provided and hereof fail not.

Witness the Honorable John Dean, Esquire, President of our said Court at Huntingdon, the first day of October, A. D. 1874.

It is said that Rip Van Winkle netted the lessee of the Altoona Opera House $795. If the performance had been advertised here, and an arrangement made for stopping the Fast Line, three or four times as many persons would have attended from this place.

A few flakes of snow went whistling through the air on Saturday last. They looked kind of out of place, and as soon as they reached the earth they silently disappeared. We don't like snow, but then, we suppose, it don't make much difference to it whether we do or not.

The miners at Matilda Furnace are at work and will soon have sufficient stock out to start the furnace. The new firm are busy repairing about the bank. They are also bringing a first-class stock of store goods. Success to our neighbors on the other side.—Herald.

We have been asked whether we would publish a daily afternoon paper during the session of the County Institute, to which we now reply that if parties interested will agree to take 600 copies, at 15 cents, for the term of five days, we will do so. Each teacher could readily take a half-dozen copies.

An aged citizen of Trough Creek Valley visited the Broad Top Coal region and partook somewhat of Local Option, and by the way found it necessary to get down and take a snooze. A brigade of boys noticed this, and thought to do him a kindness, on a cool evening, by building a breastwork of sticks around the old man and putting fire to it.—About the time it was in full blaze the old man partially awoke from sleep, and discovering his awful situation, and in the impulse of the moment exclaimed, "Eh, in h—l at last!"

There is a little paper published at Randolph Minnesota, called the Randolph Enterprise, which informs us that J. Addison Lightner, a whilom resident of Shaw's Creek, lately married, "is now in the land of the Pennsylvania Dutch." This means that he has been paying a visit to his friends, but we object to the "Dutch." There isn't any "Dutch" here, by a jug full. It is true that he and his "frau" were here; they came here as came Pharoah's lean kind, and in the course of a month or so they left us looking as if they had been spending their honey-moon in a land flowing with milk and honey. It is the fate of everybody to get thin when they go to Wisconsin. Everything is thin there. Even the stories they tell about "Pennsylvania Dutch" are "too thin."

On Wednesday evening last, in the neighborhood of a score of persons, visited Altoona, for the purpose of witnessing Joe Jefferson's representation of "Rip Van Winkle." Through some misunderstanding the Fast Line was not stopped and part of the number were obliged to leave before the close of the piece, while others were compelled to remain over in Altoona until the next morning. The lessee of the Opera House, having invited the public to his entertainment, should have arranged for the accommodation of his friends, but having failed to do this, it was as little as Mr. Black could have done when appealed to to have stopped the train, and especially so when requested by a Superintendent of another road. There is no reason why the usual courtesies should not be observed between railroad men. There may be a mistake out somewhere. We hope so.

FARMER DOBBINS AND THE NEWSPAPER.—"Dan," said a well-to-do farmer to his hired man, "I wish you would send me your late paper. I want to see how the market is, and things in general."

Dan went off to obey orders, when a plain-spoken bystander, whom we will call John, said to the farmer: "Why don't you take the paper yourself?"

"Well," said Dobbins, "I don't see the use when I can get Dan's when I want it."

"Well, but do your family not want to read, or how do you all spend your evenings?" said John.

"Well, as to that, nobody cares for reading at our house. We find plenty to do. I look after my accounts and the money matters; the old woman knits; the girls sew and the boys go to town of nights to sport around a bit," said Dobbins.

"Well, I do not see what you do for wrapping paper, and so on," said John.

"Oh, well enough, we use a square of check for bundles and the old woman begs as many as she wants for tieing up apple butter or a pattern from Dan's wife."

"Yes, I see now," said John," "you are willing to use Dan's papers for all purposes, and he your hired man and you a rich farmer, and I have heard it said that you never put an advertisement in a paper in your life; is that so?"

"True enough," said Dobbins, "I ain't fool enough to waste my money that way, and as for Dan, he will take a paper any way, and I don't hurt it by reading it."

"Well, how does Dan spend his evenings?" asked John.

"Why he and all of them have their heads buried in a book or paper. I would not tie my boys up so for anything. I want 'em to go out and see and hear and know something."

"Let me interrupt you, Mr. Dobbins. Dan's family is a very intelligent one, and he has a daughter there that a nabob might be proud of," said John.

"Oh, yes, pride and poverty go together," said Dobbins. "What do you think, Dan's wife wanted me to get paper for her to put on her room, but I was not green enough; but Dan was fool enough to get it. I don't paste my money on old tenant houses, and Dan puts on too ——"

"Hold on, Mr. Dobbins. Dan is a perfect gentleman, and well posted in everything," said John.

"Yes, yes, he posts himself up to all the big fellows in town, and I may stand in a corner and say nothing."

"The fact is, but excuse me, Mr. Dobbins, you know nothing to say. If you would subscribe for a paper and know how politics are you might talk too," said John.

"Oh, what do I care for politics! There's no money to be made by it. I generally look at the money side of the question," said Dobbins.

"You stand in your own light," said John, "and to prove that you are raising up your family in ignorance, I will tell you a joke on your Sam. Some one asked him who the Governor was, and his answer was he guessed it was Grant."

"Ha! ha! ha!" said Dobbins, "what does Sam care who the Governor is so that he can make the dimes? There's not a fellow, old or young, that'll beat Sam on a bargain; buy cheap and sell dear, that's his law, and his old grand-dad's before him. I tell you, John, Sam is a sharp one on the money question!"

"Well," said John, "as I can neither convince or convert you, I must leave you to your everlasting dollar; so, good bye!"

OPENING OF THE EAST BROAD TOP RAILROAD.—The following special correspondence to the Philadelphia North American, from Orbisonia, gives an account of one of the most important events in this county since the opening of the great Pennsylvania Railroad itself. We had accepted an invitation to accompany the gentlemen composing the party, and were to join it at Mt. Union, but circumstances over which we had very little control, interfered to prevent us:

ORBISONIA, HUNTINGDON CO., PA.,
October 16th.

Another has been added to the achievements of Pennsylvania capital and Pennsylvania enterprise, by which the mineral resources of the State are developed, its industries enriched and its commercial reputation increased. And the formal celebration of the occasion draws some additional interest from the fact that one noticeable feature signalizes the introduction of an important scale of that peculiar form of railroad construction, which in this section of the country remains, even yet, a novelty. Narrow-guage railroads, though a successfully demonstrated experience in the west, have not yet become sufficiently common nearer home to be looked upon without curiosity, and of the large party assembled by invitation of its directors to take part in the formal dedication to public service of the East Broad Top Railroad but very few had ever seen a line of the sort in practical use. We left Philadelphia on Thursday morning, the 16th inst., and reached Mt. Union, on the Pennsylvania Railroad, late in the afternoon—a station not included in the list referred to by the Investigating Committee as elaborately improved with costly depot accommodations, for one dirtier and more unpromising of comfort, I cannot recall.

At Mount Union the work of the East Broad Top commences, and it is from this point that the narrow-guage road branches off up the valley of the Aughwick into the coal-fields beyond. Here the coal and iron, products of mine and furnace, and, if judgment can be made from a general air of prosperous living, future products of the soil, of the loom and of the mill, are to be transhipped to the cars of the great Company which, bearing them east or west, may deliver them to the remotest portions of the nation, if the demands of trade so wills it. It is from the development of the coal fields that the great traffic is expected and it is for this trade the accommodations have been most generous; ample and excellent arrangements having been made for the speedy and economical transfer to the cars of the main line by the erection of a dumping apparatus—I suppose there is a better name for it—costing ten thousand dollars. The process will be by running the narrow-guage cars on a trestle work to a sufficient elevation to dump their contents into pockets which can readily be emptied into the cars of the Pennsylvania Railroad on the track below.

All this we, who formed the party from Philadelphia, saw and learned while waiting for the cars in which some of us were to have our initial experience of narrow-guage travel. They arrived, of course, without unnecessary delay, backing down on us—on their little track, only three feet between the rails, and propelled by engines weighing fifteen tons, fac similes of their elder brothers, but so reduced in size as to remind us of that inconvenient bird which was too big for one, yet not big enough for two—with all the puffing and snorting customary to cars and engines of a larger growth. Outside and at a little distance a train of narrow-guage proportions impresses the beholder, unless by comparison with surrounding objects, as one of ordinary size though at a considerably greater distance than really exists. Inside the passenger cars the arrangement is necessarily different. The width permits of seating but three persons across the car so that upon the one side for half the distance, commencing at either end, is a single seat, upon the opposite side the ordinary double seat—perhaps a little narrow. At the centre of the car the arrangement is reversed. That is to say on each side of the car one-half the distance is occupied by double seats, the other half by single seats.

From Mount Union to the point at which this letter is dated—a distance of about twelve miles—the road has been completed for some months and may be considered a type of what the unfinished work is to be. It is constructed in the most substantial manner, being well graded, thoroughly ballasted, and running as smoothly as a park drive. The rails are the production of Pennsylvania's best mills, part being from the Allentown works and part from Johnstown, and are of good weight—running from forty-five to fifty pounds. The construction was under the direction of Mr. A. W. Sims, the present Superintendent of the road, and reflects great credit upon his ability as an engineer. Certainly no railroad travel could be freer from discomfort than that which brought us to Orbisonia, and if professions of admiration could be negotiated Mr. Ingham, the President of the road, might have wiped out the bonded debt with the amount heaped upon him.

Here at Orbisonia the Company has built a very comfortable hotel, situated on a hill close to the station, and to this we climbed upon our arrival last evening, lighted by the rays of the young moon and following in the track of Mr. Edward Roberts, Jr., who with lantern in hand led the way with the consciousness of the fact that he was escorting a hungry host to an unlimited supply of the best the Market House could command. Congregated in the parlors an opportunity was taken to call the roll and the following gentlemen were found to be present:

Mr. Iric Pardee, of Hazleton.
United States Senator John Scott.
General William Lilly, of Mauch Chunk.
Mr. William Dorris, of Huntingdon.
Hon. R. B. Petriken, of Huntingdon.
Mr. James North, of Mifflin.
Hon. Wm. B. Leas, of Shirleysburg.
Mr. Richard Ashman, of Three Springs.
Mr. Samuel A. Black, of Penn'a. Railroad.
Mr. W. E. E. Coxe, of Reading Railroad.
Mr. H. E. Shafer, editor Mt. Union Times.
Dr. Lewis Royer, of Trappe.
Mr. W. Y. Emory, of Williamsport.
Mr. A. W. Sims, Superintendent of the road, and the following gentlemen from Philadelphia.

Mr. W. A. Ingham, President of the East Broad Top Railroad Company; Mr. Richard Wood, Mr. Walter Wood, Mr. Edward R. Wood, Mr. A. C. Roberts, Mr. A. Sidney Roberts, Mr. Wm. Longstreth, Mr. Edward Samuel, Mr. George B. Atlee, Mr. Solomon W. Roberts, Mr. J. W. Woolston, Mr. A. W. Butcher, Mr. G. Theo. Roberts, Mr. Bhilip S. Potter, Mr. Robert T. Gillingham, Mr. Edward Roberts, jr., Mr. Lloyd Chamberlain, Mr. Edwin L. Beakirt, Mr. Edward J. Etting, Mr. Edward McIlhenny, Mr. Campbell Tucker, and Mr. Clayton MacMichael, of the North American.

This morning the real work of the excursion was undertaken, and before seven o'clock all hands were routed out and at half-past seven we started over the remaining twenty miles of road to demonstrate if such valuable lives could be risked on it safely it would be prudent for the neighborhood to use it as a means of conveyance. Robertsdale, which is the terminus of the road, was reached after a two hour's ride, the unfinished condition of the road and the fact that for a considerable distance we had to conquer a grade of 140 feet to the mile, rendering greater speed impracticable. At this point are the coal mines of the Company, and with the determination to develop them in the most liberal manner the improvements of the Company have been upon a proportionate scale—the houses for the workmen, the store for their supplies, and the station accommodations for their benefit, are all of the very best character, and an examination of the mines showed that the property will warrant this outlay. Three seams of an exceedingly good quality of bituminous coal have already been discovered, and in two of these two collieries have been opened in each; to the four collieries already under way others will be speedily added. None of the coal has yet been shipped to market, but judging from that lying at the mine we believe that it will take excellent rank, not only on account of its quality, but because of the careful manner in which it is prepared. The company has already seventy-five cars for its transportation, and this number of course can be easily augmented as an increasing trade will warrant.—There is plenty of timber and an abundance of good water convenient, so that there is every probability of a speedy and permanent increase in the size of the settlement.

Returning, after our inspection of the mines, to an early dinner at the Markle House, we were subsequently escorted to the new blast furnaces almost ready for use, and constructed by the Rock Hill Coal and Iron Company, a corporation somewhat identical in its interests with the railroad and coal-mining companies. These furnaces, there are two of them, have been erected under the same impulse to do everything in the very best manner, regardless of cost, that has marked the other enterprises, and the consequence is they are as nearly perfect, in matters apparent to the eye, as can be found in the State. A description of them would be in the main, however, but a duplicate of descriptions of other blast furnaces, and would convey no idea of the good taste which has been exercised in the selection of their site and the arrangement of their buildings. All the best appliances for the production of good and cheap iron have been introduced; and as within a stone's throw of their fires lie almost exhaustless beds of fossil ore, large quantities of which have already been taken out and made ready for the furnace; as hematite ore is found in considerable quantities in many places in the vicinity, while the limestone quarry is even nearer than the ore, and as the supply of coal is always insured by the joint ownership of mines, railroad and furnaces, there seems little reason to doubt that the investment will prove a profitable one. From present appearances I should judge that the estimate of Mr. Constable, the superintendent of the furnaces, that they would be ready to charge the furnaces before the first of the year, is a little sanguine. But whether they start then or later they will start with every attainable insurance of success. PICKET.

Pat O'Brien to the "Journal."

And surely I know thet me readers will laugh
Whin I tell thim the fun about Biddy,
But thin they will say I'm a virry great calf,
To bother meself so much wid her.

Now, Biddy, me darlin, stands on her great name,
An thinks that I must do her honor,
For she says thet this minute ther runs in her veins,
The blood of ould Daniel O'Connell.

"Oh, honey," said she, as she sot bo the fire,
"I'm a longin to be in the fashion,
And for the great bend I hev a desire,
Now, Paddy, don't fly in a pashion!

"I hev niver a shape no more then a rail,
And the Grecian would be so becomin,
An thin, I must hev a virry long trail,
To be up till ould Judy McCommin."

"Och, darlin," said I, "ye shill hev yer own way,
Ther's the ould cradle bed on the garret,
Now, fetch it shtrait down and we'll shtuff it wid hay,
An tis gist yer swate silf thet shall wear it."

I gev her the money I got from ould Blain,
To buy her a driss and a bonnet;
The driss was made up by Nancy McLain,
And a virry long trail she put on it.

And whin she was driss'd she felt like a queen,
Wid a hump risin nigh till her shouldir,
And a trail gist intended to swape the strate clean,
Thin she marched off as bould as a sowldier.

And whin she was walkin she looked right and left,
To view all the fixins around her,
For five or six pounds I'm shure was the heft,
Of the virry great bustle thet bound her.

Thin jist at a crossin ther came up a cow,
And tramped down her trail in the gutter,
They got so intangled meself don't know how,
But surely they made a great splutter.

She thin got a holt what she thought was her trail—
"Why, woman," said I, "are ye crazy?
It's pulin ye are at the poor cow's tail,
Now jist lave her go and be aisey.'

The cow run away and jumped over the fince,
And Biddy came home wid a rustle;
But niver a word hes she spoke of it since—
The trail or the cow or the bustle.

NEW P. R. R. RULES.—The management of the Pennsylvania Railroad have prepared a new set of rules and regulations for the government of their employees, which went into full effect on November first. Below we print an abstract of all of them of interest to the public:

1. Depot masters and assistants, passenger conductors and brakemen, and baggage masters must wear suitable badges.

2. No passenger shall ride on an engine or tender without an order from the General or Division Superintendent, or the Superintendent of motive power.

3. No passenger shall ride on freight trains.

4. Passenger conductors must seat passengers, and see to their comfort and enjoyment as much as possible; see that none stand on the platforms or ride on baggage, mail or express cars; put off passengers refusing to pay, at the next station; not permit drunken and disorderly persons on trains, nor allow profanity.

5. Baggage agents and masters must handle baggage carefully; the former to charge for extra weight invariably; the latter to carry only such packages, bundles, money, etc., as the Division Superintendents authorize.

6. No tickets on credit.

7. No tickets to persons so intoxicated as to be incapable of taking care of themselves, or who by reason of such condition might risk their lives by traveling; nor to any one incapable of self care.

8. Loungers are not permitted in telegraph offices.

9. No person except employees allowed to cross bridges.

10. United States mail agents, express managers, sleeping-car conductors, porters, news agents, and individuals running private cars are to be regarded and to consider themselves as employees, and conform to these rules and regulations.

11. News boys on trains will not be permitted to individually importune or annoy passengers, but may announce, in a low voice, at intervals not exceeding four times in each car, the articles offered for sale. Nor will they be permitted to deposit their papers, books, &c., on the seats of the cars, or in the laps of passengers.

12. All employees are to exercise the utmost courtesy toward passengers, giving all required information; never drinking, cursing or smoking while on duty.

WHY does the "Domestic" Sewing Machine continue to have a ready sale while other machines are a drag on the market in these times of stagnation and panic? The answer is just here: Because all experienced sewing machine men, and everybody else acknowledge the superiority of the "Domestic" over all other machines. And people knowing its superiorities, and seeing its merits will buy it, and the investment is one that pays and is never regretted. nov.4tf.

LITERATURE.

The Golden Age, a weekly journal, established by Theodore Tilton, has recently passed into the hands of the late associate editor, William T. Clark, who is now also editor and publisher. In his introductory Mr. Clark says: "It will be a paper of opinions, rather than of news, and will be specially devoted to the discussion of political, social, literary and religious topics in a thoroughly independent spirit and way. It is not the organ of any party, sect or clique, and can therefore afford to tell the truth and be honest. As its name indicates, it represents the to morrow of the world rather than its yesterday, and criticises what is in the light of what ought to be." New York.

Thomas Hunter, 716 Filbert street, Philadelphia, Pa., successor to Duval & Hunter, the celebrated lithographic publishers, will publish, about the 10th inst., a finely executed lithograph of Memorial Hall, the permanent portion of the Centennial Buildings, which are being erected in Fairmount Park, in which to celebrate the Centennial of this great nation. It will be printed in black and two tints, on the finest plate paper, 21 by 27 inches. The process of printing may be seen at the Franklin Institute Fair. Price 50 cts. by mail post-paid.

Pennsylvania Illustrated; a general sketch of the State; its scenery, its history and industries, with over 106 fine engravings. Small quarto. Cloth, $1, paper, 50 cts. Porter and Coates, Philadelphia.

For those who cannot resist the delightful scenery in which our State is so rich, and examine for themselves its great natural attractions, its marvellous improvements and boundless resources, this book will not only be valuable, but will furnish more satisfactory information than can be had elsewhere for many times its cost.

"The International Series of New and Approved Novels," now being published by Porter & Coates, of Philadelphia, is calling forth commendation from the press of the country. Two volumes are already published. $1.25 each.

The Medical Record, published semi monthly by Wm. Wood & Co., New York, is an excellent periodical, worthy of the confidence and support of the medical fraternity, and its immense circulation should be greatly increased. The same publishers also issue New Remedies, a quarterly retrospect of Therapeutics, Pharmacy and allied subjects. Edited by F. A. Castte, M. D. The American Journal of Obstitrics and Diseases of Women and Children. Quarterly. Edited by Paul F. Mundee, M. D. Archives of Ophthalmology and Otology. Edited by Prof. Knapp, of New York, and Prof. Moos, of Heidelberg. Aso the great Cyclopaedia of the Practice of Medicine. 15 vols. By subscription only.

CENTAUR LINIMENT.

There is no pain, which the Centaur Liniments will not relieve, no swelling they will not subdue, and no lameness which they will not cure. This is strong language, but it is true. They have produced more cures of rheumatism, neuralgia, lock-jaw, palsy, sprains, swelling, caked breasts, scalds, burns, salt-rheum, ear-ache, &c., upon the human frame, and of strains, spavin, galls, &c., upon the animals in one year than have all other pretended remedies since the world began. They are counter-irritant, all healing pain relievers. Cripples throw away their crutches, the lame walk, posionous bites are rendered harmless and the wounded are healed without a scar. The recipe is published around each bottle. They sell as no article ever before sold, and they sell because they do just what they pretend to do. Those who now suffer from rheumatism, pain or swelling deserve to suffer if they will not use Centaur Liniment, white wrapper. More than 1000 certificates of remarkable cures, including frozen limbs, chronic rheumatism, gout, running tumors, &c., have been received. We will send a circular containing certificates, the recipe &c., gratis, to any one requesting it. One bottle of the yellow wrapper Centaur Liniment is worth one hundred dollars for spavined or sweenied horses and mules or for screw-worm in sheep. Stock-owners—these liniments are worth your attention. No family should be without them 'White wrapper for family use;' Yellow wrapper for animals. Sold by all Druggists. 50 cents per bottle; large bottles, $1.00. J. B. ROSE & CO., 53 Broadway, New York

CASTORIA is more than a substitute for Castor Oil. It is the only safe article in existence which is certain to assimilate the food, regulate the bowels, cure wind-colic and produce natural sleep. It contains neither minerals morphine or alcohol, and is pleasant to take. Children need not cry and mothers may rest.

Farm and Household.

The Alder---Value of its Fruit where its Uses are Understood.

In truth, with us, a lowly and little-regarded tree is the Alder. It is only beside the cabin of the peasant, or his last resting-place, it finds a home. Small account, too, do we make of its fruit, and yet it appears the latter plays a most, if not the most, important part in the production of that pleasant after-dinner beverage, on whose merits, believing it to be the "real thing," the connoisseur loves to dwell—that restorative, too, which the physician, knowing the value of the sugar peculiar to the fruit of the Vine, and the tonic properties of its iron and other components, recommends so confidentially to his convalescing patient. We commend the following little paragraph, cut from our excellent contemporary, the Gardeners' Magazine, to the consideration of both. It should, no doubt, cause them to regard our lowly alder with an interest, its claims to which they would hitherto have been slow to accord:

"Jerold's joke about the old port and the alder port, will be unpleasantly recalled to 'crusty' drinkers by the following paragraph on the manufacture of Portugese wine, from a note by our Secretary of Legation at Lisbon: 'All port wine hitherto exported for the English market, is largely mixed with brandy, and is composed as much of alder-berries, as of grapes. The way in which what in England is called port wine has hitherto been manufactured for the London market is this:—The Paiz de Venhaterio abounds in alder trees; the berries of these trees are dried in the sun or in kilns. The wine is then thrown on them, and the berries are trodden (as previously the grapes) till it is thoroughly saturated with the coloring matter of the berries. Brandy is then added in proportion of from three to sixteen gallons to every pipe of 115 gallons. This is the composition of all the port wine hitherto drank in England. No pure wine not thus specially adulterated for the English taste, was allowed by the Government Committee of Tasters to pass the bar of Douro before the year 1865.' The writer of the above note is, we may mention, Mr. Robert Bulwer, son of Lord Lytton, but better known to the public as Mr. Owen Meredith, under which name he has publishdd several volumes of graceful poetry."—Irish Farmers' Gazette.

Farmers Should Grow in Knowledge.

His eyes should be open. It is the season for the closest observation and study. Not a tree or a plant but what will repay looking at! and he should see what he looks at. There should some fact become fixed in his mind with each observation.—Every bird that sings and insect that flutters in his path should attract his attention and his thought. It will be promptly answered that the farmer and fruit grower has no time for these observations. But he may have time if he takes it. He will find that the habit of observation, once established, will not interfere with his work. The plants which spring up and thrive under his cultivation are important integers in this sum of observation and growth. Daily life should add to the daily growth in the knowledge of everything about us that ministers to our comfort or profit. Too much practical, technical and critical knowledge of the habits, growth, natural history and functions of plants cannot be obtained by the man whose prosperity is dependent upon successful production. These objects should be as well known as the alphabet—as easily read as the different stages of growth and their condition as surely interpreted.—Moore's Rural New Yorker.

Wash for Fences, &c.

The following is a most excellent, cheap and durable wash for wooden fences and buildings. It owes its durability chiefly to the white vitrol which hardens and fixes the wash:

Take a barrel and slack a bushel of freshly burned lime in it, by covering the lime with boiling water.

After it is slacked, add cold water enough to bring it to the consistency of good white wash. Then dissolve in water, and add one pound of white vitrol (sulphate of zinc), and one quart of fine salt.

To give this wash a cream color, add one-half pound of ochre (in powder). To give it a fawn color, add a pound of yellow ochre, and one-fourth of a pound of Indian red.

To make the wash a handsome gray stone color, add one-half a pound of French blue, and one-fourth pound of Indian red; a drab will be made by adding one-half a pound of burnt sienna, and one fourth pound of Venetian red.

For brick or stone, instead of one bushel of lime, use half a bushel of hydraulic cement.—Practical Farmer.

An Ice House for Five Dollars.

A neighbor of mine, says a correspondent, has an inclosure of about six feet square in the clear, and six feet high.—The walls are formed of old refuse timbers thrown closely together, with no regard to form or comeliness. The roof is made of hemlock boards. The entire cost of this building did not exceed five dollars, and practically considered, it is a success; not ambitious of containing thirty-five loads of ice, but simply five loads. Ten years this little unpretentious house has been used for ice, and never yet dishonored a draft upon its crystal deposit. About six inches of sawdust was spread about upon the ground floor, and in packing a space of about nine inches of sawdust was spread upon the top of the ice, and the thing was fixed. The three main principles observed here will always insure a supply of ice, viz: good ventilation, good drainage, and plenty of sawdust. With these rules adhered to, a corner of an old pen-shed will prove quite efficient in preserving ice.

Dr. Danverne recommends the use of lime water to relieve the burning sensation produced by the sting of wasps and bees. This remedy is frequently at hand when amonia is not to be had.

THE MOST VALUABLE PATENTS EVER USED IN PIANO-FORTES.

PATENT ARION.

REVERSED WOODEN AGRAFFE.

THE COMPOUND REST PLANK.

THE FULL IRON FRAME.

AND THE SUSTAINING IRON BAR.

A FEW REASONS

WHY THE

ARION PIANO

IS SUPERIOR TO ALL OTHERS:

The ARION PIANO-FORTE has greater power than any other Piano-Forte manufactured.

It will Stand in Tune Longer, and in its mechanical construction it is more perfect, and, therefore, more durable, than any instrument constructed in the usual modern style.

The arrangement of the Agraffe, the manner of stringing, the peculiar form and arrangement of the Iron Frame

SUPERCEDES ALL OTHERS.

The use of a bar (which is a part of the Iron Frame on a line with the heavy steel stringing,) gives where most needed, and in this respect all other pianos fail.

The construction of the WREST PLANK, into which the tuning Pins are inserted, is such that it is impossible for the pins to come loosened, or the Wrest Plank itself to split, as is too often the case in other Piano-Fortes.

The Extraordinary Evenness

throughout the scale, the excellent Singing Quality, the

LENGTH AND PURITY OF VIBRATION,

all go to prove what we claim, viz: that the

ARION PIANO-FORTE

Is the Best Instrument Manufactured.

BEATTY & PLOTTS'

CELEBRATED

GOLDEN-TONGUE PARLOR ORGAN

IS ACKNOWLEDGED BY EMINENT MUSICIANS AND DISTINGUISHED MEN OF HONOR TO BE THE LEADING INSTRUMENT NOW IN USE —THEY SAY—

BEATTY & PLOTTS'

PARLOR ORGANS were awarded FIRST PREMIUM and DIPLOMA over Needham & Son's and J. Estey & Co's Organs at the Carbon County Fair, held at Lehighton, Pa., September, 1872.—Lehighton Weekly News, Oct. 5, 1872.

Committee.—Prof. Charles F. Horn, Prof. Wm. Moran, and H. D. Herdy, D. D., Hon. Z. Long, President.

St. Clair, Pa., Dec. 6, 1873.

MESSRS. BEATTY & PLOTTS—Gents: I have received the Organ sent by your firm to me, and had it examined. It gives ample satisfaction.

JOHN SINEY.

Mahanoy City, Pa., Oct. 16, 1873.

THE BEATTY & PLOTTS celebrated Golden Tongue Parlor Organ is by far the best Parlor Organ in use. I have carefully examined it, and find its tone, workmanship and durability to be the best I ever saw, and I can with pleasure recommend it to any in want of a first-class parlor organ.

PROF. O. H. UNGER.

New Bethlehem, Pa., Nov. 21, 1873.

MESSRS. BEATTY & PLOTTS—Gents: Having had one of your Golden Tongue Parlor Organs, for six months past, I thought before recommending it, to give it a fair, square trial, and am happy to testify that it surpassed all that has been said or advertised about it. I have had Professors of music, and celebrated organists come and try it, and one and all say that it is one of the sweetest and best toned instruments in the market. It has taken the shine out of all others around here. I am perfectly satisfied with it. You may publish this if you see fit, as my organ can be tried by any one wishing to do so, in proof of what I say.

A. S. R. RICHARDS,
Late of the Tamaqua Courier, now at New Bethlehem, Pa.

BEATTY & PLOTTS Golden Tongue Parlor Organs are instruments that are winning for themselves a good reputation far and wide. The career of the firm is full of interest and shows what close application to one branch of business will do. Their energy, seal and unyielding determination have enabled them to win.—Washington (N. J.) Star, March 27, 1874.

THE BEATTY & PLOTTS parlor organs are highly praised by good judges, for their sweetness of tone.—Pittston (Pa.) Comet Oct. 4, 1873.

Lawry's Station, Pa., Jan. 27, 1874.

I have had BEATTY & PLOTTS' Organ since August 14th, 1872; it gives the highest satisfaction, and has proved all that it was recommended by the proprietors.

JOB HENRY.

The BEATTY & PLOTTS' celebrated Golden Tongue Parlor Organs are pronounced unsurpassed by any now before the musical world, by all who have had the pleasure to examine them. Testimony from all parts of the country speaks in favor of them, going to show their superiority over all others.—Ashland, Pa., Bulletin, Dec. 5, 1873.

Lawry's Station, Pa., Jan. 27, 1874.

Beatty & Plotts' Parlor Organ, of N. J., seem to give full satisfaction to all purposes all over; and I must say by the experience I have of one of these organs—which I have had in my possession for nearly two years, and is in excellent condition—I would advise all who wish to get a good and substantial parlor organ to see the above named party, before buying anywhere else.

DAVID SCHEIRER,
Music Teache

Slatington, Pa., Feb. 6, 1874.

BEATTY & PLOTTS' Parlor Organ I like better than the Standard, and gives better satisfaction, as I find by experience in my profession.

PROF. FRANK MAYER.

Tamaqua, Pa., Dec. 16, 1873.

Those desiring a beautiful ornament for their homes, as well as an instrument of unsurpassed musical excellence will find it in the Beatty & Plotts Golden Tongue Parlor Organ. It gives entire satisfaction, and, in fact, is the leading instrument of the day.

JULIA C. WHITENIGHT, Organist.

MESSRS. BEATTY & PLOTTS, of Washington, New Jersey, are happy. They live in an atmosphere of music. Music soft and sweet, music strong and warlike, the shrill notes of the warrior, or the lute-like tones of love are thrilling and ever sounding in their establishment, and their famous Golden Tongue Organs are a household necessity all over.—Tamaqua (Pa.) Courier, March 28, 1874.

PARLOR ORGAN.—We call attention to the advertisement of Beatty & Plotts, manufacturers of Parlor Organs, in another part of this paper. These organs are fast superseding all others on account of their good qualities. A number of these instruments have been sold in this county, which give general satisfaction. These instruments are highly recommended by the best musicians in the country.—Sunbury American.

St. Clair, Pa., April 7, 1874.

To DANIEL F. BEATTY:—I have received my organ all right. It pleases me very much. I never played an organ that gives me better satisfaction, the case looks splendid. I have a friend waiting for one. Please send me another No. 60 at once for him. He advocates your organs above all others. Enclosed please find check.

Very respectfully,
JOHN MILLS.

TO THE CITIZENS OF PENNSYLVANIA.—Your attention is specially invited to the fact that the National Banks are now prepared to receive subscriptions to the capital Stock of the Centennial Board of Finance. The funds realized from this source are to be employed in the erection of the buildings for the International Exhibition, and the expenses connected with the same. It is confidently believed that the Keystone State will be represented by the name of every citizen alive to patriotic commemoration of the one hundredth birth-day by the nation. The shares of stock are offered for $10 each, and subscribers will receive a handsome steel engraved Certificate of Stock, suitable for framing and preservation as a national memorial.

Interest at the rate of six per cent. per annum will be paid on all payments of Centennial Stock from date of payment to January 1, 1876.

Subscribers who are not near a National Bank can remit a check or post-office order to the undersigned.

APPLETONS'

AMERICAN CYCLOPÆDIA

NEW REVISED EDITION.

Entirely rewritten by the ablest writers on every subject. Printed from new type, and illustrated with Several Thousand Engravings and Map

The work originally published under the title o THE NEW AMERICAN CYCLOPÆDIA was complete in 1863, since which time the wide circulation which it has attained in all parts of the Unite States, and the signal developments which hav taken place in every branch of science, literatur and art, have induced the editors and publisher to submit it to an exact and thorough revision and to issue a new edition entitled THE AMERICA CYCLOPÆDIA.

Within the last ten years the progress of discov ery in every department of knowledge has made a new work of reference an imperative want.

The movement of political affairs has kept pac with the discoveries of science, and their fruitfu application to the industrial and useful arts an the convenience and refinement of social life Great wars and consequent revolutions have oc curred, involving national changes of peculia moment. The civil war of our own country, whic was at its height when the last volume of the ol work appeared, has happily been ended, and a ne course of commercial and industrial activity ha been commenced.

Large accessions to our geographical knowledg have been made by the indefatigable explorers o Africa.

The great political revolutions of the last decad with the natural result of the lapse of time, hav brought into public view a multitude of new me whose names are in every one's mouth, and o whose lives every one is curious to know the par ticulars. Great battles have been fought and im portant sieges maintained, of which the details ar as yet preserved only in the newspapers or in th transient publications of the day, but which ough now to take their place in permanent and authen tic history.

In preparing the present edition for the pres it has accordingly been the aim of the editors t bring down the information to the latest possibl dates, and to furnish an accurate account of th most recent discoveries in science, of every fres production in literature, and of the newest inven tions in the practical arts, as well as to give succinct and original record of the progress of po litical and historical events.

The work has been begun after long and carefu preliminary labor, and with the most ample re sources for carrying it on to a successful termina tion.

None of the original stereotype plates are bee used, but every page has been printed on ne type, forming in fact a new Cyclopædia, with th same plan and compass as its predecessor, bu with a far greater pecuniary expenditure, and wit such improvements in its composition as hav been suggested by longer experience and enlarge knowledge.

The illustrations which are introduced for th first time in the present edition have been adde not for the sake of pictorial effect, but to giv lucidity and force to the explanations in the tex They embrace all branches of science and of natu ral history, and depict the most famous and re markable features of scenery, architecture and ar as well as the various processes of mechanics an manufactures. Although intended for instructio rather than embellishment, no pains have bee spared to insure their artistic excellence; the co of their execution is enormous, and it is believe they will find a welcome reception as an admira ble feature of the Cyclopædia, and worthy of it high character.

This work is sold to Subscribers only, payabl on delivery of each volume. It will be complete in sixteen large octavo volumes, each containin about 800 pages, fully illustrated, with sever thousand Wood Engravings, and with numerou colored Lithographic Maps.

VINEGAR BITTERS.

PURELY VEGETABE.

FREE FROM ALCOHOL.

Dr. J. Walker's California Vinegar Bit ters are a purely Vegetable preparation, mad chiefly from the native herbs found on the lowe ranges of the Sierra Nevada mountains of Califo nia, the medicinal properties of which are extrac ted therefrom without the use of Alcohol. Th question is almost daily asked, "What is th cause of the unparalleled success of Vinegar Bit ters?" Our answer is, that they remove the caus of disease, and the patient recovers his health They are the great blood purifier and a life-givin principle, a perfect Renovator and Invigorator o the system. Never before in the history of th world has a medicine been compounded possessin the remarkable qualities of Vinegar Bitters i healing the sick of every disease man is heir to They are a gentle Purgative as well as Tonic, re lieving Congestion or Inflammation of the Live and Visceral Organs, in Bilious Diseases.

Dr. Walker's California Vinegar Bit ters act on all these cases in a similar manne By purifying the Blood they remove the caus and by resolving away the effects of the inflamma tion (the tubercular deposits) the affected par receive health, and a permanent cure is effected

If men will enjoy good health, let them use Vin egar Bitters as a medicine, and avoid the use o alcoholic stimulants in every form.

IRON IN THE BLOOD.

PERUVIAN SYRUP

MAKES THE WEAK STRONG

PERUVIAN SYRUP AN IRON TONIC.

The Peruvian Syrup, a Protected Solution o the Protoxide of Iron, is so combined as to have the character of an aliment, as easily digested and assimilated with the blood as the simplest food It increases the quantity of Nature's Own Vitalizing Agent, Iron in the blood, and cures "a thousand ills," simply by toning up, Invigorating and Vitalizing the system. The enriched and vitaliz ed blood permeates every part of the body, repair ing damages and waste, searching out morbid se cretions, and leaving nothing for disease to feed upon.

This is the secret of the wonderful success o this remedy in curing

Dyspepsia, Liver Complaint, Dropsy, Chronic Diarrhœa, Boils, Nervous Affections, Chills and Fevers, Humors, Loss of Constitutional Vigor, Diseases of the Kidneys and Bladder, Female Complaints,

—AND—

ALL DISEASES

—ORIGINATING IN A—

BAD STATE OF THE BLOOD

Or accompanied by

DEBILITY

—OR—

A LOW STATE OF THE SYSTEM.

Being free from Alcohol in any form, its energizing effects are not followed by corresponding reaction, but are permanent, infusing strength, vigor, and new life into all parts of the system, and building up an Iron Constitution.

Thousands have been changed by the use of this remedy, from weak, sickly, suffering creatures to strong, health, and happy men and women; and invalids cannot reasonably hesitate to give it a trial.

See that each bottle has PERUVIAN SYRUP blown in the glass.

A thirty-two page pamphlet containing a succinct history of the Peruvian Syrup, a valuable paper on progress in medical science, a treatise on Iron as a medical agent, testimonials and certificates of cures from distinguished physicians, clergymen, and others, will be sent FREE to any address.
